

Randy L. Limbacher
Executive Vice President
Exploration and Production - Americas

Randy L. Limbacher is executive vice president, exploration and production – Americas of ConocoPhillips.

Prior to joining Burlington Resources in 1985, Limbacher held various engineering positions with Mobil and Superior Oil. He served as senior vice president of production and exploitation since 2000, and in other assignments including president of Burlington Resources North America and vice president, regional operations in the San Juan and Gulf Coast divisions. He was elected to the board in 2004, and assumed responsibility for all oil and gas exploration, development and production operations, as well as for day-to-day operations of the company, in 2002. Prior to his current position, Limbacher was executive vice president and chief operating officer of Burlington Resources, and served as a member of the board of directors and the office of the chairman.

Limbacher serves on the board of directors of Junior Achievement of Southeast Texas, Inc. His professional affiliations include the Society of Petroleum Engineers, the Independent Petroleum Associates of America, the American Petroleum Institute and the Louisiana State University Engineering Industry Advisory Board.

Limbacher received a bachelor's degree in petroleum engineering from Louisiana State University in 1980.